WHERE THE WILD ROSES GROW

On the third day he took me to the river. He showed me the roses and we kissed. And the last thing I heard was a muttered word. As he knelt above me with a wock in his fist.

From the first day I saw her I knew she was the one. She stayed in my eyes and smiled. For her lips were the colour of the roses that grew down the river, all bloody and wild.

Would she walk
with me a while.
Through this night so vast. She took my hand.
this lovely creature. "Yes", she said.
"Yes, I'll walk with you a while"
It was a joyful man she led.

Through
the night, through the night. The wind lashed and it whipped me. When I got home, my lovely creature.
She was no longer with me.
Somewhere she lies. Beneath the slow drifting sands.

When the cities are on fire. With the burning flesh of men. Just remember that death is not the end. And you search in vain to find. Just one law-abiding citizen. Just remember that death is not the end.

When the storm clouds gather 'round you. And heavy rains descend. Just remember that death is not the end. And there's no one there to comfort you. With a helping hand to lend. Remember that death is not the end.
